do lars of the money which had been inclosed in the Quebec letter.

T is morey was very easily identified. The person forwarding the same, bad put the stamp of his business card upon the back of every bill inclosed, and had furrished the department at Washington with a deaription of the money, the names of the banks, &co., and upon one twenty-dollar bill was written the name of a gentleman. The money found upon Hepkins corresponds with the description of that furnished the department; there was $30 missing, which had probably be enspent by Sopkins. He was immediately arrestee by Huse, who took his prisoner to Kennebuak and brought him back to Portland by the inward train, and committed him to jail. He will have his examination before the commissioner to day.

and committed him to jail. He will have his examination before the commissioner to day.

It was undoubtedly the intention of Hopkins to effect an exchange of the money in Bostoo, as he inquired of some one how long time he should have in that city before the train returned to Portland, and upon being told "half an hour," replied "that would
"be long enough for him to do the business he wished
"to transact."

MAIL ROBBERY.—Within a year past, there have been requent deprecations committed upon the mails in their progress to and from Canada, and although the energies of the special agents of the department have been brought into requisition, they failed to discover the effender. More recently a letter mailed at Quebec inclosed in which was $200 directed to the States, failed to reach its destination, and some circumstances leading to a suspicion of Henry Hopkins, eq., a lawyer at Island Pond, Vermont, and lately postmaster at that place, the department determined to keep watch or his movements. They sent to Mr. Woodbary, our postmaster, to put an officer upon the track of Hopkins if he came to this city, and to follow him if he went to Boston; to watch him closely and see what kind of money be offered.

Hopkins arrived in this city on Monday from Island Pond, and put up at the Elin house. Officer Hase was immediately put upon his track, breakfasted with him on Tuesday merning, and learning that he was bound to Boston, took the same train of cars. After leaving Saro, Officer Huse thought him contracts and cahing Hopkins into the saloon of the car, informes him that he was suspected of having counterleit money in his possession, and that he must be searched unless he produced the money he had with him. This Hope his did, and among the bills he exhibited there was found one hundred and seventy do lars of the money which had been inclosed in the Quebec letter.

The money was very easily identified. The person
